

Twisted Throttle's Denali LED Lights

These 10-watt LED auxiliary lights draw little power, generate little heat, and have no filament to break under harsh road conditions. Yet, they are nearly as powerful as low beams (900 lumens), at a distance. The units are sturdy die-cast aluminum, about the size of standard issue turn signals. Twisted Throttle claims they can be submerged in up to 3 meters of water, but our tests didn't include that! Driving and fog lenses are included.

Mounting kits are available for a wide variety of bikes. We used the M5 kit, which replaces a front fender mounting bolt with a longer bolt, extension posts, and an L-shaped mount. Installation was easy and directions clear. If you've ever hard-wired a GPS or heated clothing, you can definitely mount these lights.

With proper alignment, Denali's LED lights do a credible job of supplementing the low beams, emitting a cool, bluish hue. Just as importantly, they help owners be seen, and ultimately, be safe.

Evaporative Cooling 6529 HyperKewl™ Standard Sport Vest

Even with the best all-weather gear available, when summer hits riding can sometimes feel unbearable. So when the temps recently soared during a particularly hot tour in South Carolina, it was the perfect opportunity to try out the HyperKewl™ Sport Vest.

Designed to gradually release water through evaporation, the V-neck vest with zipper closure keeps you cool and comfortable. Quilted nylon exterior covers an inner fabric constructed with HyperKewl polymer, distributed evenly throughout. When water is added, the fabric swells uniformly, without becoming bulky.

With temps averaging between 85 and 100 degrees, I stopped for gas and soaked my HyperKewl vest. I wrung out the excess water and put it on – really, I couldn't believe the difference. Instead of hot and sweaty, I felt cool, and I managed to stay that way for several hours. If you expect to ride in hot climates, you'll definitely want the HyperKewl vest in your wardrobe.
